FORTY-NINTH YEAR. NUMBER 21 | CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO, TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1932 | THREE CENTS

COUNTY EXPENSE CUT MONDAY; SALARIES OF DEPUTIES UNCHANGED

Extension Work Appropriation is Reduced $400 By Co. Solons

FUNDS ARE SLASHED

Different Groups Aided Dads in Work

The Pickaway-co commissioners late Monday adopted their budget for 1932 with a saving of $69,977.70, according to a report made Tuesday. The grand total of appropriations for the ensuing year is $306,520.98 while a year ago it was $385,298.68. The reduction was made with the assistance of the different tax groups of the county.

Comparative figures for each department of the county government and for each different fund were not available Tuesday because County Auditor Cliff M. White and Deputy Auditor T. D. Krinn were in Columbus attending a called meeting of the Ohio tax commission with new tangible and intangible law the chief discussion topic. In order to prevent any error in copying the figures from the commissioners' list of appropriations it is deemed advisable to consult the auditor or his deputy.

SALARIES SAME

Salaries of deputies and employes [illegible] budget approved by the commissioners as had been petitioned for by a number of persons who attached their names to petitions circulated in the county. The amount of money for county agricultural extension work was reduced from $5,600 to $5,200, according to the figures of the commissioners.

The commissioners decided that salaries of Pickaway-co deputies and clerks were not high enough to warrant a slash and acted accordingly. It is thought that had salaries of appointees been reduced several resignations would have been handed the commissioners.

STATEMENT WRONG

While it was stated Monday that elective officials had said they would take a reduction in salaries if Judge J. W. Adkins of common pleas court would attach his signature to a petition circulated by Charles Cromley of Harrison-twp, this statement was learned to be erroneous Tuesday when a number of county officials stated that they had not been solicited by Mr. Cromley to sign the petition advocating their willingness to take a cut.

Only two officials that could be found averred that they had been asked to sign the petition.

Judge Adkins draws only $64 47 per month from the county, the bulk of his salary coming from the state.

A portion of the budget paring was made from different expenses of the various offices. Nearly $30,000 is taken from the county road and bridge fund with nearly $20,000 sliced off the sinking fund and $10,000 taken from the state road and bridge fund.

Pop Eye Will Visit City

Poy Eye, the famous comic strip character beloved by all the children of America, is coming to Circleville Thursday and will be at the Cussins & Fearn store on N. Court-st between 2 and 5:30 p. m.

Cussins & Fearn invites everyone in Pickaway-co to shake hands with the famous sailor. Poy Eye has been appearing daily in Columbus and thousands of boys, girls and grown ups have met him.

No character in modern fiction has appealed to the public's imagination as has this sturdy sailor with his unique vocabulary and his mighty fists. No obstacle on land or sea has been able to stop Pop Eye, and bets are being made that he will "lay among the sweet peas" the man of mystery whom he is to fight in Columbus at a future date.

CHILD DROWNS

SIDNEY, O., Jan. 26—Junior Helminger, 2, drowned yesterday when he slipped from the bank and fell into the Miami river.

PETITIONS ASSAILED BY GROUP

A group of 26 tax-payers representing various organizations of the county appeared before the board of county commissioners in the county auditor's office Monday afternoon, four hours after a group of 113 had appeared in the court room before the commissioners asking drastic reductions in the budget for 1932, and rebuked and scorned the facts as laid down by the group who appeared in the morning.

Several of the afternoon speakers stated that the leaders of the movement to slash salaries and cut in half appropriations for county extension work had led a number of people into signing the petitions, under the guise that taxes would be reduced Some of the speakers cited instances in which they were alleged to have been approached by persons bearing the petitions for budget reduction who made erroneous statements concerning salaries of county officials and the amount of money paid for county extension service.

GLICK CHAIRMAN

Turney Glick of Washington-twp, spoke first, stating that [illegible] county agricultural extension service naturally anticipated a reduction but it did not expect a decrease which would be out of line with cuts on the rest of the county budget. "The extension service could not stand a 50 per cent cut. It would be absolutely unfair to force a 50 per cent cut here and a 10 per cent cut on other parts of the budget."

Mr. Glick explained the fact that a number of persons do not understand the purpose of the county extension department. "This extension department is not associated with the county farm bureau in any way. It is a different organization. The farm bureau sponsored the extension work before money was appropriated for the purpose. Pickaway-co must pay to the state of Ohio $1,500 per year for extension work, whether or not it employs a county agent or has an extension department.

According to several speakers at the afternoon meeting many county persons have been misinformed as to the salary of the county agent. It has been circu-

Throng Attends Cooking School

Mrs. George O. Thurn working with the staff of The Herald has completed the final arrangements for the big Cooking School which opened this afternoon at Memorial Hall. A colorful and handsome kitchen is built on the stage, where it is in full view of the crowd of women who filled the hall before the opening hour. The kitchen is practical as well as beautiful, for there is a range which bakes to perfection, a sturdy refrigerator which keeps the food safe and chilled to delicious frosty coldness and there are dozens of other large and small devices intended to save time or take the hard work out of housework.

In this kitchen Mrs. Thurn began her discussion and cooking lessons. She made a number of dishes right on the stage, explaining every gesture, telling why the various ingredients were added, what they are and why we want and need them as food. The dishes which she prepares are the recipes which are printed on leaflets distributed to every woman as she enters the hall. But additional recipes were given from the platform, and there were a flood of helpful, clever suggestions. So pencils and notebooks should be brought along by the women who attend the School.

The Herald is happy to invite not only the brides and young housekeepers of Circleville and vicinity to hear Mrs. Thurn but the older and more experienced home makers are also urged to attend. For them, especially the women with old fashioned kitchens, the display of new furnishings and the discussion of the newest in modern home making methods will prove especially interesting.

No tickets are required There is no admission fee of any kind. There are no reserved seats. So the first to come have the choice places. The doors open at one o'clock each day, just an hour before the School session begins.

PROBE OF OHIO 'HOME' STARTS; CHARGES FILED

Reveal Professional 'Leeches Fleecing' Inmates of Home

OFFICIALS TO ACT

Bootleggers, Vice Mongers Are Cited

SANDUSKY, O., Jan. 26.—Revelation that professional "leeches" are fleecing inmates of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' home of their pensions was made here today as the investigation into charges of mismanagement at the institution by the senate investigating committee was about to get underway.

Under instructions from the Erie-co grand jury, Sheriff John W. Parker and his deputies went to the home today to probe into charges that the war veterans were being victimized by bootleggers and other vice mongers.

GRAND JURY CALLED

The grand jury, following a secret investigation into charges of inmates and officials of the home, directed Sheriff Parker to "clean up" the institution of the reported vice conditions.

A group of bootleggers, gamblers and women operating in the community surrounding the home "have been thriving" on the pensions of the war veterans, the grand jury charged

World War veterans were said to have attracted many of the vice dealers to the institution. Of the 908 inmates, more than half are World War veterans.

The senate investigating committee will begin its probe into charges of "petticoat rule" and mismanagement at the institution tomorrow.

Commandant Perry L. Nill stated today that he had received word from State Welfare Director John McSweeney that the committee would arrive tomorrow afternoon and launch the investigation immediately. The probe is expected to be concluded on Thursday.

COXEY'S PLAN DISAPPROVED

Tax Commission Holds 'Bond Issue' Proposal is Illegal In State.

COLUMBUS, O. Jan 26—The State Tax Commission today threw cold water on Gen. Jacob S. Coxey's proposal to issue $200,000 in bonds to be issued the same as money for unemployment and poor relief in Massillon.

Under Ohio laws it is impossible for the plan to be carried out, John S. Edwards, member of the tax commission, ruled

Admitting all other phases of the unique proposal, Edwards said, there are two proposition embodied in the plan that would stop its legal consummation.

They are

First: Under Ohio laws, such a proposition cannot be submitted to the people except at a general election, the next of which is scheduled to be held in November.

Second. Under Ohio laws, such bonds cannot be issued beyond a five-year period. (Coxey proposed a 25-year period.)

EDDIE STINSON

Wing of Plane Strikes Flag Pole on Golf Course Causing Crash

FLEW FOR 20 YEARS

Aviator Learned From Wright Brothers

CHICAGO, Jan. 26. — One of America's most brilliant aviation careers came to a tragic end today with the death of Eddie Stinson, pioneer flyer and airplane builder, from injuries received in the crash of his cabin monoplane.

The veteran aviator, whose aerial exploits have thrilled thousands, died in Illinois Central hospital at one o'clock this morning, after doctors had battled through the night to save his life. He was 37 years old.

Death was caused by a crushed chest and internal injuries.

3 OTHERS HURT

Meanwhile, Stinson's three passengers were in a hospital in serious conditions from injuries received when the famous designer's newest model cabin monoplane fell to earth last night on the Jackson park golf course.

Stinson himself was the most seriously injured and doctors gave up hope of saving his life a few minutes after he and his three passengers were rushed to the hospital. Nevertheless, they continued to battle for the noted flyer's survival until just a few minutes before the end.

The injured passengers were:

Fred M. Gillies, 36, steel company executive and president of the Chamber of Commerce of East Chicago, a former All-American football star at Cornell. He received an injured spine and a broken leg.

Clarke Field, 30, Chicago representative of the Stinson Aircraft corporation. He suffered a broken shoulder and internal injuries.

DEMONSTRATED PLANE

The crash occurred after Stinson had completed a series of demonstrations of his new model at the municipal airport. He and his passengers were on their way back to Wayne, Mich., where the Stinson factory is located.

As the plane began soaring over Lake Michigan its tanks became exhausted. Lacking fuel, the famed pilot turned the ship about and headed for the Jackson park golf course which borders the lake. He was gliding down to a safe landing when suddenly the right wing of the ship struck a 75-foot flag-pole. The wing fell off and the plane dropped to the ground.

Police rushed to the scene and pulled the four injured men out of the coiled and twisted wreckage. The fortunate circumstance that pilot and passengers did not at once lose their lives was attributed to the fact that the ship did not catch fire.

Stinson, whose 1,700,000 miles in the air, made him the dean of America's flyers, was so hopelessly injured when he reached the hospital that Dr. William T. Harsha said his death would be but a "FRENCH FRIED" but . . . don't endanger his digestion with the WRONG fat!

Do you think you have to wait for your frying fat to smoke before it's hot enough to fry in? Then — beware. Smoke tells you that fat is burning. And a burnt fat is a decomposed fat. Why risk painful indigestion with a decomposed fat?

Fry with Crisco and treat your digestion kindly. Crisco is a pure, wholesome fat, made by Crisco's own secret process to keep sweet and fresh and digestible. Don't wait for Crisco to smoke.

Crisco does not smoke at correct frying heat (see directions in recipe). It is sweet and pure and digestible when it gets into your stomach, duodenum and small intestine. These are the danger points where a burnt fat may irritate and cause indigestion.

You never ate such delicious and digestible French-fried Potatoes as you'll get when you fry with Crisco—the digestible fat.

RECIPE for the best French-fried Potatoes you ever tasted!

You're going to find that French-fried Potatoes are delicious and digestible—IF—they're fried in Crisco. Crisco is a pure, sweet fat that makes foods taste better, digest more easily.

Pare 5 or 6 potatoes. Cut into strips ⅜ inch thick. Soak in iced or chilled water one hour. Drain. Dry thoroughly between towels, so they won't spatter. Fill ordinary saucepan two-thirds full of Crisco, the digestible vegetable fat. Heat Crisco. It is correct frying heat when inch cube of bread browns in 20 seconds (395° F.). Fry potatoes to rich brown. (OR—fry potatoes in the morning to very delicate brown. Then, just before mealtime, reheat Crisco and finish frying.) Drain on unglazed paper. Sprinkle with salt. Note how good they'll taste because Crisco is a sweet, digestible vegetable fat! Don't throw away the Crisco you fry with. Strain it—and fry with it again and again. Crisco does not carry the flavor of one fried food to any other.

In the cooking school conducted in Memorial Hall under the auspices of The Herald, Mrs. George O. Thurn uses and recommends Crisco, the modern shortening that digests easily

Grand-sons of every outstanding Dams are mated back on their Grand-dams to obtain this same intensified production Mr. Barlow used charts of pedigrees to show how some of the most famous sires and cows of different breeds have been developed. Outlining in detail the breeding formulas through which they were produced. Eugenic Baby Fad Died Like Eugenie Hat Craze

The recent $100,000 suit, brought by Kate Pullman, former vaudeville actress, against Shirley Dahl, bride of Roscoe Ails, well-known comedian, Miss Pullman's former partner and father of her eugenic baby, recalls the furore that the unconventional experiment in motherhood aroused a couple of years ago. When Kate Pullman gave birth to a baby at New York, in August 1928, she announced that it was a eugenic baby, the result of an experiment in modernistic motherhood. She steadfastly refused to reveal the identity of the child's father. But when an article published in a theatrical magazine named her partner, Roscoe Ails, as the father of another "eugenic" baby, born to Mrs. Grace Burnham, a wealthy widow, some weeks before, Miss Pullman admitted that Ails was also the father of her child. Mrs. Burnham vigorously denied that Ails was her collaborator in her venture into the realms of eugenics, but Kate broke off all business and social relations with the comedian, regardless. Recently when Ails married his dancing partner, Shirley Dahl, Miss Pullman sued the bride for $100,000, charging alienation of affections. But Ails made a cash settlement on Kate and the eugenic baby out of court and the case was dropped.

SECOND CANAL NOT NEEDED FOR YEARS

Panama Can Handle Traffic for Several Decades.

Washington.—Surveys conducted by the War department may postpone construction of a second canal connecting the Atlantic for several decades if not until the end of the century.

Scientific inquiries have disclosed, according to reports submitted to Washington, that the growth of traffic will not necessitate any addition to the present inter-oceanic canal facilities until 1950 at the earliest. The consensus expressed in official conclusions was that when added lockage facilities are needed, a third series of locks should be added to the Panama canal before work is begun on a second canal.

No Need for Many Years.

The findings reached by the interoceanic canal board headed by Col Ernest Graves of the United States army and the engineers for the Panama canal indicate that the present capacity of the Panama canal will suffice until 1970 and that with additional locks the canal would not reach capacity for possibly 100 years. To build this third set of locks would cost $140,000,000, while construction of the proposed canal through Nicaragua would cost more than $700,000,000

The traffic through the acnal today runs around 20,000,000 tons annually. The present tonnage capacity of the canal is set at 70,000,000 With a third set of locks the capacity would be 140,000,000. On the basis of Panama canal estimates that tonnage will not increase faster than 1,000,000 tons a year, it is estimated that 100 years would elapse before the canal would reach capacity. The inter-oceanic board said the proposed Nicaraguan canal would increase the traffic capacity through Central America by 80,000,000 tons

Defense Another Matter.

Notwithstanding the array of trafic statistics lined up by the inter-oceanic board and the canal engineers, the possibility exists that other factors rather than cargo capacity may dictate an earlier date on a new Nicaraguan canal than now seems probable. These include the advantages a second canal would give to national defense and the greater assurance two canals would give of uninterrupted waterway passage of commercial ships between oceans. It is also asserted that construction of the canal in Nicaragua would "tend to stabilize the government of Nicaragua as well as all Central American governments."

The tendency of commercial ships to increase in size may hasten the day when a Nicaraguan canal should be constructed.

While recommending against construction of the Nicaraguan route during present conditions of world trade and world finances, the interoceanic board pronounced the building of such a waterway feasible from both an engineering and a construction standpoint.

Glands and the Emotions

THE much-discussed theory of Dr. Sigmund Freud that nervous disorders result from supressed desires is said to have been accepted to some quarters as an excuse for licentiousness. There seems to be danger that the theories now being put out concerning the ductless glands may also have an evil effect, for the gist of the new doctrine is that conduct is governed by the manner in which they work, and this appears to present human beings as under the control of physiological forces which they cannot regulate, and so not responsible for what they do.

An example of the new teaching may be found in a recent declaration of Dr. Charles Louis Mix, professor of clinical medicine in Northwestern University. Cowardice, he says, is a matter of physiology and not of mentality and character. "Fear is caused by the suspension of secretion by the adrenal glands, which are just above but not connected with the kidneys. It is this stopping of the secretions at the moment of fright that causes the dilated pupil of the eye, the dry mouth, shaky knees and soaring heart that are symptoms of fear. After the first moment of alarm, the glands renew their secretions with more than normal activity thus restoring the balance of courage and enabling animals under observation to cope vigorously with the situations confronting them."

Teachers of the theory concerning the ductless glands profess to be able to account for the character and actions of great men by telling how the glands worked. If the glands are in proper condition one will achieve greatess, they say; and if they are not it is futile to expect greatness. This is a sort of fatalism which, if generally accepted, would tend to discourage effort.

But there is one cheerful feature of the theory. It is suggested that means may be found to stimulate or fegulate the glands so as to make of their possessors whatever is desired. It is proposed for instance, to make brave men out of cowards by medical or surgical treatment which will increase the flow of deficient adrenal glands.

Brains

TIME was when it was maintained that the reason women were mentally inferior to men was because women's brain weighed less than men's. In this way we once accounted for a good many of women's alleged shortcomings. Whatever we did not understand and could not explain in any other way was accounted for by a shortage girls are cleverer than boys.

Today there are many people who believe that at least at school age girls are clever than boys. There may be very complex reassons for this which the scientist could reveal if he cared to: but a much shorter way out of the difficulty has been found by a woman phrenolgist who rejects the complicated proof in favor of something much simpler.

She maintains that up to a certain age girls are brighter than boys because the girl's head grows faster than the boy's More particularly is it the breadth of the head that counts We are told that girls are apt to be round headed and boys long headed. This so-called expert consoles the boys, however, with the information that later on in life boy's heads begin to widen.

Further investigation may find more convincing proof for this contention than it has now. Or we may have to do what we did in the case of the belief in the weight of the brains - - discard it altogether. Until such time comes, however, there is one thing which all the owners of heads will do well to remember.

For the proper development of the intellect it is more important to make good use of one's brains than to [illegible] for success on their weigh[illegible] he size of or shape of t[illegible]

SYNOPSIS

Leaving Hawaii shortly after her father's death, young and beautiful Fanchon Meredith goes to San Francisco, where she meets and loves a handsome man named Tony. Fanchon is shocked to learn that Tony is a racketeer, implicated in a recent murder. She, too, is now wanted. Fanchon escapes in an airplane under the name of "Smith." Evelyn Howard, whom she had met on the boat coming from Hawaii, is aboard. Evelyn is enroute to New York to live with her aunt, the wealthy Mrs. Carstairs, whom she has never met. After Fanchon confides in Evelyn, the latter treats her coolly. The plane crashes and Fanchon is the only survivor. She decides to escape Tony and the past and start life anew by masquerading as Evelyn. She requests a doctor to wire Mrs. Carstairs that "Evelyn" is safe. A wire comes from Mrs. Carstairs saying that Collin cannot meet Fanchon. Fanchon learns Collin is Mrs. Carstairs' only son Mrs. Carstairs meets Fanchon at train exclaiming "But you're not Evelyn, are you . . You can't be." The girl's terror of being discovered passes when Mrs. Carstairs explains she couldn't believe anyone so beautiful could belong in the family.

CHAPTER X

"I see now," Mrs. Carstairs said laughing, "what a foolish mistake for me to make! It is really a very good likeness. But I thought the other girl was—on You said . . 'the girl on the left.' So it was your mistake as well, my dear."

Fanchon said, low, and as steadily as she could,

"I [illegible] was idiotic of me."

"Well, never mind She," said Mrs Carstairs, looking at Evelyn Howard abstractedly, "is well [illegible] In fact, I thought that in [illegible] pictures I could see a trace, [illegible] a suggestion of your mother's," she stopped and her face changed. "Oh Evelyn," she cried, suddenly, "have you forgiven me, forgiven us all for our outrageous treatment of [illegible] and of you?"

"Of course," said Fanchon, moved by the appeal in the blue eyes

"You," said Mrs. Carstairs, "don't the least look of May about you You are much lovelier than she ever was Perhaps," she added, with an effort, "you are like your father's people."

"I have heard so," Fanchon said, breathing and took a deep breath of [illegible] She was still trembling a little from reaction.

"I want," her aunt said, low, "ask you anything about the accident It is too close to you now. Later, perhaps when you feel more like telling me." I was half insane when they were reached me, with gratitude, with a realization of what might so easily have been" She smiled, [illegible] and saw how Fanchon [illegible] the mention of the dis-

"[illegible] so," Fanchon said. Good night, be [illegible] on his own and gave [illegible] But I would have [illegible]

[illegible] to the apartment [illegible] We [illegible] I wrote you [illegible] for you to [illegible] possible as much [illegible] you, when we were [illegible] in the summer you [illegible] to spend in [illegible] I have a season here. [illegible] we may go abroad to- [illegible] We'd you like that. Evelyn asked with wistfulness

"I'd love it," said Fanchon, softly

Oh, she thought, what a miserable coward I am! She looked about her frantically She had expected to meet consideration, kindness, duty. She could have faced that, could have rendered something in return, for a measure, a time, of safety. But to encounter this warmth of seeking, asking, wistful affection was almost more than she could endure; it was something she had so longed for since her father's death; something she had longed for all her life as well. Dear as her father had been to her, she had always dreamed silently and secretly of a gracious, beautiful understanding mother. And here was such a woman, the perfect answer to those childish dreams But she was taking what was offered her under the most hideous of false pretenses. She thought of Evelyn, of the shattered little body, gone by now perhaps to its lonely grave, surrounded by strangers She put both hands to her face and shook with pity and despair and hatred of herself.

"My dear," said Mrs. Carstairs, gently, "I realize the strain you have been through. You must try and forget. And all the vanished years beside. You must begin all over again. With me."

Fanchon murmured something . . . "so terribly kind," she said.

"Kind! As if I could make up for all the years of neglect and unkindness," Jennie Carstairs told her strongly. "I never can. It is you who are kind, Evelyn. If you knew how I have longed all my life, for a daughter! Collin is the best son in the world but most women want daughters, to to fuss over, a little, to dress, to spoil a bit . . . I've always wanted a daughter," she said. "You knew . . . did your mother tell you—" that Collin was a twin? The other twin died. A dear little girl! Thirty years ago, but I've never forgotten," she said. "It was shortly after that that we went to England and France to live . . . Your uncle," she added, "was very kind, he understood. I was not young at the time. I was thirty or so, and I knew I would have no more children. It was a great blow to me . . to us both."

There was a little silence. Fanchon felt her heart lift on a sudden surge of hope. She was not Evelyn Howard. She was not of this woman's blood. But Evelyn was dead You robbed the dead of nothing Fanchon was alive If she could be to this woman what Evelyn would have been, if, with her own longing for affection, for home and for safety, she could even be more than Evelyn would have been, would that not be counted perhaps, in her favor? Evelyn, she knew, from the little she had seen of her, was less concerned with her emotional relationship to her aunt than what that aunt held out to her in the way of promises of ease, luxury, money—a chance perhaps to marry well With those things Fanchon had very little concern What she wanted and what she was prepared to give in return was something very different, something into which money and material things did not and could not enter

She spoke, starting a little over the unaccustomed form of address

"I—I want to make you as happy, Aunt Jennie," she said in her low, unsteadily husky voice, "as you have made me already."

A little silence fell between them And in it Fanchon [illegible] to dedicate herself to [illegible] service, whatever it might be

Presently—"Here we are," Mrs. Carstairs said briskly "I'm putting you in one of the guest rooms for your own rooms are to be done over for you this summer."

"Gere" was an apartment on upper Fifth Avenue, a roomy house apartment overlooking the Park and the reservoir A man servant opened to them and Mrs. Carstairs said, "my niece. Miss Howard. Jameson."

Jameson, an elderly person, seemed genuinely moved. He made Fanchon a curious, stilted little speech of welcome and Fanchon smiled at him, gently. She realized then that all her servants adored Jennie Carstairs. It was easy to see why. "Jameson," explained Mrs. Carstairs, leading the way in, "has been with me for many years and so is one of the family." I brought him up from the country to look after us for a few days."

The apartment seemed enormous to Fanchon. She caught glimpses of a huge dining room, and music room, on one side, living room and library on the other, all opening off a square hall These rooms explained Mrs. Carstairs further, hall opened upon a terrace and Fanchon could see through the long French windows flowers blooming and small trees, gay chairs and couches and awnings.

"I keep the apartment in livable shape." Mrs. Carstairs went on, "as Collin runs in and out all summer and must have a place to stay."

She hesitated and began again, her clear skin flushing.

"Collin . . ." she went on, "is up North. You may have wondered why he isn't in town to meet you?"

"No," said Fanchon with perfect truth, "I hadn't wondered at all."

"I wrote you," the other woman said, "about his attitude. But I would rather explain more fully later."

She took Fanchon into a lovely room on the second floor. It had a big connecting bath. "It is at the end of the hall from me," Mrs. Carstairs told her. "Your own room, when it is ready opens on the gallery and next to mine."

A middle-aged woman was waiting in the room. "This is Emma," Mrs. Carstairs told Fanchon, "she will look after you."

She had done so already. The bed was turned down, the windows open to what cool air there was. A sheer nightgown and a negligee and slippers lay nearby.

"I guessed at the size," Mrs. Carstairs said. "You are taller than I thought, but we will manage to get some little frocks for you before we go down to the Island and with the minimum of discomfort. You wrote me, you know, that you had very little."

Fanchon flushed in shame for Evelyn Howard who could pass her trunk to come East and write her aunt that she "had very little." Had Fanchon been in her place . . but she was in her place!—she would have gotten along without she had and said nothing out of sheer stubborn pride. She said now,

She wondered a little [illegible] just what clothes the trunk would contain Evelyn, as she remembered her from shipboard had time to run to trails and turbelows of clothes of an inexpensive material and [illegible] of them Fanchon's own [illegible] were more expensive yet simple.

"Never mind that now," Mrs Carstairs said quickly, "you get undressed and into a hot tub Then you climb right into bed [illegible] having my own doctor come and look you over, after your dip."

"I'm perfectly all right," Fanchon protested, "please don't bother Really, Aunt Jennie!"

"I want to be sure," the older woman told her, smiling, "we're to have a light supper on a [illegible] and I will have one with you [illegible] the doctor. And tomorrow we will talk."

Unsightly Sties on Eyelids Often Due to Carelessness

Rubbing Eyes with Hands Is a Frequent Method of Infecting Delicate Tissues, While the Malady Is Invited by Neglect of Health.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

VERY few persons escape that annoying and distressing condition known as "sty." You don't need to be a doctor to recognize it. It is unpleasant to look at and certainly contributes to an appearance of real misery.

It is amusing to hear the various theories given as to the cause of sty "Bad blood" and overuse of the eye are among the most frequent explanations.

A sty is an infection of the tissues in the margin of the eye-lid At first there are redness and inflammation Within a few days the spot begins to swell The inflamed area increases in size and a yellowish spot appears in its center Pretty soon this ruptures and pus escapes. The whole trouble clears up within a few days

In the early stages, hot compresses should be applied to the sty Hot boric acid solution is excellent to use in this way The heat brings the sty to a head and hastens the escape of pus

Frequently it becomes necessary to open the sty When this is done, the duration of the trouble is shortened by many days

Sties often recur. For this reason vaccine injections have been recommended to head off these repeated "crops."

Yellow oxide of mercury ointment is another classical remedy. It should be rubbed daily into the margins of the eyelids. This is done on going to bed at night. Upon arising in the morning the lids should be cleansed with warm boric acid.

Sties are caused by infecting the lids This may be due to rubbing the eyes with dirty fingers. Another factor is a run-down condition. When the body is in good health, and the powers of resistance are normal, sties will not occur

Chronic indigestion, constipation, lack of the proper number of hours of sleep, excessive use of the eyes, faulty diet, kidney and intestinal disturbance—these are a few of the causes that may help to bring about this condition.

The prevention is simple. Avoid rubbing the eyes with your hands. If you do a lot of reading and use your eyes excessively, your eyes should be tested. If there is any defect in vision, glasses should be worn.

You should be sensible about it and wear them if they are needed. There are two reasons why people subject to sties and who need glasses should wear them. Glasses give normal vision and remove any unnecessary strain on the eyes. Secondly, glasses serve to protect sensitive eyes against dust and wind.

Please remember that recurring sties are a sign that you are indulging in habits that are injurious to your health. Correct your habits. Keep the eyes clean Eat abundantly of foods that supply the necessary vitamins Make it a point to obtain sufficient sleep.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Charles "Buddy" Rogers has another strongly dramatic role in "Working Girls", at the Cliftona Theatre feature for tomorrow and Thursday. In "The Lawyer's Secret" and "The Road to Reno" he showed capacity for strong dramatics, so he was shifted from personality parts to those of heavier intensities.

Rogers, called 'Buddy," since his appearance in a winning personality role in "Wings," is one of those luckly young men who found themselves in pictures without much planning for a screen career He was just finishing his college course at Kansas University when his father chanced to hear that Paramount was seeking candidates for a company picture school, about to be opened at the New York studios He asked that his son be given a test A few weeks later young Rogers was surprised to learn that he was to be given a chance in the school Six months later he was given the male lead in "Fascinating Youth," the graduation picture.

Cameramen engaged in filming Bad Company," Helen Twelvetrees' new starring vehicle for RKO Pathe, which is now playing at the Grand Theatre, had their ingenuity taxed to the utmost in order to obtain many of the production scenes.

The script of the photoplay called for many of the sequences to be filmed in action on the water. Not in a studio tank but out in open water, sometimes in an extremely rough sea.

U. S. RESENTS JAP ACTION

Activities in Shanghai Draw Comment from High Circles In Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—The United States will pointedly resent any independent Japanese military activities within the international settlement at Shanghai for the purpose of coercing Chinese civilians there.

In high admistration circles, it was indicated today that this government would view "serious concern" an attempt by Japan to land additional forces in the settlement. Such action could be taken in accordance with international practice only upon the ground that Japanese nationals or their prosperity were in danger by lack of adequate police protection in the settlement.

Streams in this section included in the order are; Sunfish creek and tributaries in Pike and Ross-cos, Salt Creek and Little Salt Creek and tributaries, except Pigeon Creek, from source to mouth in Pickaway, Fairfield, Hocking, Vinton, Ross, Pike and Jackson-cos, Deer Creek and tributaries in Clark, Madison, Fayette, Pickaway and Ross-cos.

LIGHTS of NEW YORK By WALTER TRUMBULL

An ancient sailorman, now ashore in New York, entertained an old friend. The entertainment consisted of considerable liquid refreshments. As the guest finally swayed to his feet to go, he picked up something off the table.

"Wait a minute," said the host, "them's my teeth."

"They are my teeth as I put them on the table," declared the guest

"I tell you nobody can walk off with my teeth," said the host, so much annoyed that he drew back his lips in a snarl.

"You old fool," said the guest, "you're wearin' your teeth."

"My mistake," he said. "So I

Mrs. Al Jolson, who was Ruby Keeler, is one of the most popular of the theatrical colony. I suppose you know the story of her aunt who lived in a small town and rarely saw metropolitan newspapers. Shortly after the marriage, this aunt happened on a theatrical section which carried a picture of Al Jolson in black face. In great perturbation she wrote to her sister, Mrs. Jolson's mother, saying, "How could you let little Ruby do such a thing?"

A young man of Manhattan had a job with a big financial institution, but decided that there were too many men in line ahead of him and that they looked too healthy. So he looked around for another job and thought he would like to be window dresser. He never had dressed any windows, but he talked the owner of an uptown shop into letting him try it. He did so well that others hired him and now he is with one of the large stores and drawing several times his bank salary.

Norman Bel Geddes says that, at the age of nine, he took part in theatrical performances held in a barn in Saginaw, Mich. That's nothing. At the age of six I performed in a circus held in a barnyard in Old Mission, Mich. The cows and chickens also performed, but rather unwillingly.

Victor Killan, who was one of the cast of "Desire Under the Elms," and who more recently played in "Cloudy with Showers," has a peculiar hobby. He likes to build chimneys, in fact, he likes to do any sort of mason's work. He ran out of places to build chimneys on his own farm, so built some for his neighbors. When city people stop their cars and ask for directions, Mr. Killan puts on a rube act that would be worth money in the theater.

There is a branch of the public library, on East Fifty-eighth street, which makes a specialty of theatrical literature. It has a special room devoted to books on theatrical matters. Among the least frequent visitors seem to be actors. I never saw one in there.

The public library on Fifth avenue is a great refuge in cold weather for those unfortunates who have no place else to get warm. They go in, ask for a book and sit at a table in the reading room until the place closes at 10 p. m. They are not obliged to read. As long as they stay awake, nobody disturbs them until closing hour. Some of them try to stow away in the library for the night, but an inspection is made and they always are discovered. Few persons appear to know that the library has a restaurant for its employees and other conveniences, which make it almost a little village in itself.

PSYCHOLOGY TO AID NAVY PICK FLYERS

Simple Intelligence Tests to Be Applied.

Washington. — Psychology will play a vital part in selection of the navy's aviators in the future if a series of experiments nearing completion prove satisfactory.

A wealth of data collected on the basis of a study of naval aviation personnel over a period of four years, has revealed certain simple intelligence tests which may determine whether a man is fitted to fly, before he is even allowed to venture off the ground, according to navy experts.

Board to Get Data.

They plan to present their studies and conclusions to the navy general board with a recommendation that all navy aviation personnel be required to come to certain mental type standards before being allowed to train for flying. They have for several years been convinced their methods would save the lives of personnel and prevent destruction of expensive equipment, and they carried out exhaustive experiments to prove their case.

Officials in the naval station medicine office revealed that flying records, in virtually every case, have borne out prediction based on mental tests. In many cases these men whom the mental tests showed to be of a type unadaptable to flying have crashed to death or serious injury, and in almost every instance they have acquired flying records far from desirable from an efficiency standpoint.

Decision Near.

The navy has not adopted the tests as part of the requirements for prospective flyers, but decision in the matter is expected in the near future.

Tests were carried out under the leadership of Capt. Dallas G Sutton, navy representative at St. Elizabeth's hospital here. Sutton was at the Pensacola (Fla.) naval air base when he began his experiments several years ago, and since that time has appointed members of the navy medical corps to co-operate with him at Hampton Roads, Va., and at San Diego, Calif.

Boy Born in Nebraska, Twin Sister in Iowa

Sioux City, Iowa.—Twins, a son and a daughter, were born to Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Simpson of South City, Neb. The son was born at the family home shortly after midnight and then the mother and the babe were hurried in an ambulance to a Sioux City hospital. An hour later the daughter was born. So one baby is a native of Nebraska and the other of Iowa.

DECISION FACES PHYSICIANS TODAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 25 --Surgeons disagreed today whether to subject little Diana Moore to an operation which would give her one thousand to one chance of leading a happy normal life.

Moral and scientific reasons were advanced why the operation on her skull to permit her brain to expand and grow was inadvisable even though it was conceded that unless it were performed the baby would not escape idiocy.

Mrs. Lillian Moore, 18 year old mother of Diana, was eager to have surgeons undertake the delicate operation which she said would give her daughter a "fighting chance."

The baby will be examined again tomorrow after which a definite decision regarding the operation will be made.

DIAMOND BRACELET OBJECT OF SEARCH

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Search for a valuable bracelet of diamonds and emeralds lost by Mrs. Muriel Vanderbilt Church Phelps, social leader of Newport, R. I., was carried on today by a local insurance company.

She herself denied reports the jewelry was worth more than $5,000, although first reports stated it was valued at nearly $50,000.

Mrs. Phelps carried the gems in a bag when she visited her mother, Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, here last week. She believed the bracelet fell through a small hole in the bottom of the bag.

A smooth performance was presented at the first dress rehearsal Monday evening for "Who Wouldn't Be Crazy," the play to be given Wednesday and Thursday at the high school. The children of the Children's Home attended the rehearsal.

Inmates one and two, John Mason and Martha McCrady, respectively and also the black face characters, John Maxey and Margaret Long will provide many laughs from the audience.

Girls in the show wear different costumes in each act. The first chorus will be in the form of a pajama parade and the second chorus will wear black and white costumes. Betty Cooper rehearsed her "Ted Lewis Dance" with the cast last night.

Other features on the program will be songs by Carolyn Herrmann, a tap dance by Paul Davis, songs by Elizabeth Roundhouse and Veronica Kuhns and the Hilo Hawaiians, James Smith and Orville Coleman.

Jane Drum, understudy of Betty Barnes of the chorus, who is ill with the scarlet fever, also went through her dance. The show will begin at eight and doors will open at 7:15 p. m. No reserve seats may be had but tickets may be purchased at the door.

COOK SCHOOL

Mrs. Thurn urges everyone to come as early as possible so that the session begins with every "pupil" in place

When the lecture and cooking was finished, the women were invited to come up into the kitchen to examine the equipment and look at the dishes just prepared by Mrs. Thurn. A few lucky women carried home these delicious dishes for their evening dinner. Some others received the filled market baskets a number of which were distributed this afternoon and will be every afternoon of the School. While they are examining the kitchen equipment, the women were also invited to examine the handsome gifts on display. These are donations from various merchants of the city, and are to be distributed to the School audience on Friday at the last session.

Women who entertain a great deal, and who are seeking new ideas in table decoration and menu making will find Mrs. Thurn a lively source of information and inspiration. Like all other housekeeping questions, these entertaining problems may be written on the question blanks and left in the question box. Mrs. Thurn will answer them during the session.

"Martha Washington" Herself

matter of a few hours. The veteran flyer never regained consciousness after the crash.

Notified of his condition, the aviator's wife made immediate preparations to rush from her home in Wayne to her husband's bedside. She was about to board a plane late last night when she was advised she could not reach Chicago in time to see her husband alive. She gave up the trip.

BEGAN AT 17

Stinson's passion for the art of flying asserted itself at the early age of 17 in the days when anyone who took off in an aerial "crate" was regarded as a daredevil.

His first tutors in the science of aeronautics were none other than the Wright brothers. His first exploits in the air were conducted as a stunt flyer at circuses and county fairs. He became widely known as a daring pilot and when his fame had grown firmly established he abandoned barnstorming to develop into one of the nation's leading exponents of constructive aeronautics.

He was the world's champion endurance flyer twice and held the altitude record several times. He was the first to negotiate a non-stop flight from Chicago to Detroit and the first to make a night flight from Chicago to New York.

TAUGHT DURING WAR

During the war he was a civilian flying instructor at Kelly Field, Texas. At the close of the war he turned to designing planes and began developing the various models which bear his name.

He organized the Stinson Aircraft Corporation of which he was president. The plane in which Brock and Schlee made their historic flight from Detroit to Tokyo was designed and built by Stinson.

Any member of the family of Arthur Kibler, 403 E. Franklin-st, is invited to be a guest of The Herald to the Grand Theatre Call at this office for ticket.

VOL. 3. NO. 4 Tuesday, January 26, 1932

NOT FOR WOMEN ONLY

If other men are like H. G., they pay very little attention to the periodicals that go to the women-folks in their family. But, now and then, Friend Wife calls our attention to an article that appears in one of her magazines. It was one evening last week that our attention was directed to an article in the Ladies' Home Journal (February issue, on page 20). It was written by that well-known writer, Mary Roberts Rinehart. And after reading that article for the second time, we thought that we'd tell others, especially the men-folks, about it. It's too long a tale to relate in RTT, so we're going to ask you to look up that magaazine and read the article. If you want things to pick up around old Roundtown, follow the advice contained in that Rinehart article.

There's another short artice in that issue that, if followed out, would work along the same lines that is advocated by the Rinehart article. Mrs. Sippel president of the American Federation of Women's Clubs is the author.

While we did not attend the furniture markets in Grand Rapids and Chicago, we are beginning to get the benefit of the new things shown at those places. Representatives of the various furniture manufacturers are dropping in with their new 1932 models of household furniture. And is it snappy! And is it carrying a good value! Say, one day last week it was our pleasure to select a few suites of dining and bed room furniture that are "nock-outs." We've been buying furniture, for you folks for better than 15 years and we've never had an opportunity to buy STYLE and CONSTRUCTION for so little money. We're all peppered up about the goods. And when the suites arrive, we'll tell you about them in this column.

Say, you office men, if you knew what a saver of time a modern steel letter-file is, you'd rush right down to 148 W. Main, and have us send one up to your office immediately. Yes, we have them right here on hand.

* * *

'Tis said that a certain Circleville motorist, who is very careful about crossing R. R. tracks, stopped to look and listen for the choo-choo. All he heard was the car behind him crashing into his gas-tank.

* * *

With the new low prices prevailing on rugs, we believe that farmers will be buying them for their pigs instead of using straw. Just a few days ago, a shipment of good quality Axminster rugs arrived that are marked to sell at $26.00. These same rugs sold for $28.50 only last fall. These rugs are seamless and closely woven into very neat designs. If you should ask our opinion, we'd say that they are just a little better than any other rug that we have seen for the same price. Pick your rug NOW, pay a little on it, and we'll save it for later delivery.

* * *

The hum of the sewing machine is in the air. At least, we've been putting out quite a lot of needles and belts. Remember, when you were young, how your mother would hum along with the sewing machine? "Them was the happy days."

* * *

Did you go to school this afternoon? Naw, we don't mean the public schools, but The Herald's Cooking School at Memorial Hall. If you did not, then we hope that you'll take a cue from us and drop in tomorrow afternoon and see what Mrs. Thurn has to tell you. Of course, you know how to cook. However, the teacher may know how to do some things that are new to you. These schools are quite popular in other cities. Columbus, for instance, has been having them for several years. Chillicothe, so we understand, has been holding them for the past eight years. "Standing room only" is the sign usually displayed down at our neighboring town. A traveling man, hailing from Cambridge, told H. G. that Mrs. Thurn was quite a drawing card in his town last week. So, we say again, don't fail to drop in at one or more sessions of the school.

And while you are at the school, don't fail to notice that lovely dining room furniture that we have been privileged to place on the stage. It's a beautiful mahogany suite of the Colonial period. It's a suite that will never go out of style. In fact, the style is one that has been in vogue from the early days of this country and is still good. In all of our experience in furnishing goods for the home, this is the first instance that we have been able to offer such graceful and lovely furniture for so little money. We'll trade it to you for only $126.00.

* * *

Don't fail to take in the school on Thursday and Friday, as well as Wednesday. On the last two days of the school, it is our plan to let Mrs. Thurn use an entirely different type of dining room furniture. On those last days, we are planning to set up an English Oak suite of nine pieces. The table is of the refectory type, with the leaves in the ends of the table. And the finish is too beautiful to express. Just because we call it an "oak" suite, don't get it into your head that it is the old fashioned yellow golden oak finish. Far from it. The finish is a beautiful nut brown. Don't fail to see it. And, lest you are wondering about the price, let us say that we'll take just $162.90 for the nine pieces.

"If you've spotted the man who stole your car, why don't you get it back?"

"I'm waiting for him to put on a new set of tires."

Did you notice that Mrs Thurn did not have to kneel or "squat" to get the pans out of the cupboard of the Sellers kitchen cabinet that she is using at the school? It's not necessary to do such graceful (?) contortions with a good Sellers. Just open the doors and the pans come sliding out to you; close the door and they go back. And then, did you notice where the bread-box is located? It's up on the level with the work-table. No stooping six times each day to get to the bread like the old-fashioned cabinet users had to do. And did you notice that the lower shelf was covered with porcelain like the table top? It won't make rings, nor wash off like ordinary cabinets. No indeed, a Sellers is a back and step saver in the kitchen.
